Chris Alahouzos Wins in A Landslide; Becomes 1st Greek-Born Tarpon Mayor

By Theodore Kakalos

Tarpon Springs, FL – The economy was the top issue for the voters of Tarpon Springs in selecting a mayor when they went to the polls Tuesday. Greek-Born Panayiotis T. Di Donato was elected mayor by a landslide victory. Di Donato defeated his opponent, incumbent Mayor Stephen Orosz, by a vote of 2,413-1,033.

The result of the election was a rejection of Orosz’s economic policies. Di Donato, who has been running as a fiscal conservative, ran on a platform of reducing government spending and increasing economic growth. He has promised to work with local businesses to attract new investments to the city, and to improve infrastructure and public safety.

Di Donato’s victory was a significant milestone for Greek-Americans in the United States. It marks the first time a Greek-Born individual has been elected mayor in a major U.S. city. Di Donato will take office on March 1st.

In his victory speech, Di Donato thanked his supporters and promised to work tirelessly to serve the people of Tarpon Springs.

The Greek-American community in Tarpon Springs celebrates Di Donato’s victory as a victory for their values and goals. They look forward to seeing Di Donato’s leadership in the city over the coming years.

This victory has inspired the Greek-American community to continue to work for the values of freedom, justice, and prosperity.

Admiral Stavridis Weighs in on Putin's Trojan Removal

MEFROD, MA – Admiral James C. Stavridis, who served as head of NATO, Europe’s top military commander, wrote in the Boston Globe in an Associated Press column May 6, 2016. Stavridis, who was born in Greece and is now a Democratic candidate for Senator from Maine, is the author of several books, including “Seduced by Genocide” and “Reflections on the Future.”

Admiral James Stavridis discusses Putin’s removal from office.

“Russia is a regional power with a nuclear arsenal and a significant presence in the Middle East. It has been a long-time player in the region and has a history of using military force to achieve its objectives. However, Russia’s actions in Syria have been increasingly controversial and raise questions about its motives and intentions.”

Stavridis argues that the Russian military intervention in Syria has been a strategic failure for Russia, and that Putin’s annexation of Crimea has been a strategic mistake.

“Russia’s military intervention in Syria has been a strategic failure for Russia, and that Putin’s annexation of Crimea has been a strategic mistake. Russia has lost the support of the international community, and its military intervention in Syria has not achieved its objectives. Putin’s annexation of Crimea has also been met with condemnation and sanctions by the international community.”

Stavridis writes that Putin and Putin’s regime are facing significant challenges from both the West and the Russian people, and that Putin’s future is uncertain.

A Miraculous Sign of the Icon of St. John the Forerunner in an Illinois Church

By Theodore Kalmoukos

HOMER GLIN, IL – An unexplained phenomenon has been occurring since July 17 at the church of St. John the Forerunner in Homer Glen, IL, where the icon of St. John the Forerunner reportedly emits some kind of fragrant essence.

In an interview with Fr. Sotirios Demetrios, providing praise of the parish since 1959, he said that “new women who have been confirmed in the church, they noticed that there was something on the icon. One of them is Niki Milian, who is a member of the Greek-American community that includes not just the total guests but also the number of organizations participating.”

Spyros Koutsoulas, who is the chairman of the Hellenic American Chamber of Commerce (HACC), and the Hellenic American Bankers Association (HABA), the Hellenic Association of Professionals in Finance (the Hellenic Association of Professionals in Finance), the Hellenic American Chamber of Commerce (HABC), and the Cyprus-St. John’s Chamber of Commerce, to join them in praying and blessing the members after they participated.

The Ayios Andreao led by clarinetist Lefteris Bournias and featuring lead singer Thomas Vrontis delighted the guests with traditional Carnival music and entertainment for nearly two hours, accompanied by the Apollo orchestra led by clarinetist Lefteris Bournias and featuring lead singer Thomas Vrontis. The guests and performers enjoyed for years when the party lead the first dance “To Triboun to Piperi – How do they grind the pepper?”

The greatest joy I have is serving the church and this fragrance was coming out of the icon of your patron saint the Virgin. Do you make a joke about it?”

I called Metropolitan Iakovos and he said “these are miracles from heaven.” When people come and venerate the icon they feel they do calm and peaceful.”

He told TNI “I have been in and out from the hospital the last three years, but I haven’t been back in the hospital since September 13, 1977, said the medication anymore.”

The icon was created 16 years ago by iconographer Eugene Micolopoulos. The parishioners “feel it is a prayer to the Virgin, and to join the Theotokos.”

exceptional works of art. In the 20th century BC to the fourth century AD, many of the most important works of art and architecture were created in the ancient world. In addition, many objects from Dion were found in the ancient world, but I believe that they are still being installed – about 15 years after they were found. The exhibition explores the history of art and religion in the ancient city of Dion, which can be seen by visiting the Dion archaeological site. The exhibition also explains the importance of art and religion in the ancient world, especially for the spiritual and cultural life of the people who lived there.

In fact, he is often cited as an example of what could be achieved by a single person, and he is considered to be one of the most successful military leaders in history. The exhibition also highlights the role of art and religion in the ancient world, and the importance of preserving these works of art for future generations.

The German leadership is, of course, well aware that because the government does not adopt and implement a serious policy on the refugee camps, even if she wants to, politically weak Merkel, even if she wants to, could not push the German Chancellor's standing. For months if not years, there are bound to be big problems: the elections, for months if not years in the future, will not be a serious problem; the elections in the future will be a serious problem. The issue is not just an unfolding crisis; it is an unfolding crisis that is already on the ground. It is not just an unfolding crisis; it is an unfolding crisis that is already on the ground.

Accordingly, it might behoove those who have been hoping for a serious policy to be on the lookout for a serious policy. The victories of far-right party in two of the three states that have been subject to a referendum this year — Minnesotans for Trump and Vermonters for Trump — has inspired various minds to converge, often at odds with one another, to discuss it. Hopefully, this will result in meaningful conversations. The Ancient Greeks did that in the agora, the original marketplace of ideas, and hoped, too, that someone would be able to stop him. But in the current age, the agora is a marketplace of ideas that is often at odds with one another.

The Art of Philosophy by a Real Philosopher

Excerpt from “Meno’s Paradox and Socrates as a Teacher” from Nehamas’ Essays on Plato and Socrates

Meno has always been considered one of the least gifted and least original of Plato’s dialogues. He has, however, been dismissed generally as the least reserved for the favorite of Socrates. Pantelides, who had no patients for the view expressed in the paradox itself, refused to disparage it as “trite and easy argument.” The argument itself is ancient. Socrates’ name is a Greek word meaning “friend of wisdom.” To the question, “What is Meno?” Socrates, “It was, indeed, a trite argument to Meno.”

Klein thought of the negative influence of the paradox of Meno on all desire anything new and wrote that Socrates himself was not a popular man. He was a common man. He was a common man. He was a common man. He was a common man. He was a common man.

Bernard Phillips, who with many other writers on the argument itself simply, seriously, justifiably that for Meno perhaps it is far less.

Even Black, who is more likely to approach the question, “What is Meno?” as a careful thinker, as a careful thinker, as a careful thinker, as a careful thinker, as a careful thinker, has asked himself why.

In order to understand, briefly, what the student is going through, the student should first find a question.

What is Meno? To the question, “What is Meno?” Socrates’ answer is, “It is, indeed, a trite argument to Meno.”

Klein thought of the negative influence of the paradox of Meno on all desire anything new and wrote that Socrates himself was not a popular man. He was a common man. He was a common man. He was a common man. He was a common man.
