Americans love rankings, and Greek-Americans are no different. Our annual 50 Wealthiest Greek-Americans edition is, year after year, our most popular special issue of all. And the most popular part about it, the rankings, is actually the least important. Although The National Herald reached out to every person on this year’s list through the best available means possible, only a few responded, let alone took the time to provide their financial net worth or share other information about themselves.

But some of the important information some made was about the general inaccuracy of the such numbers – not just our numbers, but any numbers, including those of Forbes, widely regarded as the “gold standard” of such rankings. Many wealthy people are very private and do not like to be in the public eye at all. There may very well be a Greek-American reading this right now, who was not included on this list, but who has more money than anyone mentioned, and he or she is perfectly happy remaining under the radar. Others, in contrast, might want to overinflate their numbers for whatever reason. A perfect example of wild variations in estimated net worth is the case of President Trump, whose net worth at press time Forbes estimated to be $3.7 billion. On the campaign trail last year, he said he was worth about $10 billion. Some have speculated that the reason he didn’t disclose his tax returns is because they would suggest an amount far below both of those figures, and he would look foolish in his boasting. Whichever version is true, the point is, numbers are just numbers.

That said, here is how we arrived at ours: the three categories are Primary (the person or his/her representative officially and publicly gave us the figure), Source (a particular source, such as Forbes) is named, or TNH Estimate (TNHE). The TNHE is based on unofficial and/or unconfirmed sources, or previous TNH figures adjusted for the average gain/loss of the total Primary or Source individuals from last year to this one. Accordingly, in the spirit of good journalism, our duty to you, our readers, is to explain how we arrived at these figures and rankings, and leave it to you to determine what you think of them.

It is also important to pay careful attention to the title, “50 Wealthiest Greek-Americans.” It means 50 of the wealthiest Greek-Americans, not necessarily the top 50 wealthiest Greek-Americans. The latter would be a nearly impossible list to compile, for various reasons. First, there is no database anywhere in the world that can track all Greek-Americans, again, largely due to the privacy reason. Second, the way a name sounds can sometimes be misleading. For instance, our top-ranked individual, Jim Davis, doesn’t “sound” Greek at all, whereas two individuals with a far greater net worth, who would easily be numbers 1 and 2 on this list – Jeff Bezos and George Soros – both sound like they’re Greek, but they’re not. Next, there is the important matter of philanthropy. There are many remarkable people featured in this issue who give away a great deal of money, and that causes them to drop in the rankings. We don’t think they should be “penalized” for that in anyone’s mind. As we advised last year, the best way to enjoy this issue is not to become too attached to the net worth numbers and the rankings, but rather to appreciate the biographies of these 50 individuals (or families), a few of whom are further featured in separate profile pieces herein. Finally, we invite you, once again, to enhance this list by letting us know of any information – including, perhaps, a particular Greek-American we may have overlooked – that you think should be included. We continue to be better and better, year after year.
Our Mission
The American Friends Of the Blind In Greece identifies, acquires, and delivers the best possible resources and opportunities available to organizations in Greece, dedicated to improving the lives of Greece’s blind and severely sight-impaired people. We are a 501(c)3 charitable organization registered with the IRS.

Our History
Since 1946, we have helped support services for the blind by funding such institutions at FAROS – the Lighthouse For The Blind, and The Tactual Museum for the Blind located in Greece. We have created infrastructure and services that help meet the total needs of visually-impaired individuals with goal of helping them live dignified, independent and activity-rich lives.

Programs We Support

- Braille printing and lending library
- Audio book / magazine / periodicals recorded on tape, disc and streaming
- Employment for the blind in:
  - Metal Workshop
  - Brush and Broom workshop
  - Textile Workshop
- Ceramics workshop
- Tactual Museum where blind people can ‘touch’ objects
- Theater troupe of the blind
- Health and fitness for the blind

With the severe economic crisis Greece has endured, the public funding for blind programs has decreased dramatically. Now more than ever, the blind people of Greece need our help.

Won't you please help us help the blind in Greece by making a tax-deductible donation?

George Marcus, a Real Estate Entrepreneur and University Trustee, via the National Hellenic Society, Spiritedly Aims to “Make America Greek Again!”

George Marcus revolutionized the real estate industry. Along with his partner, William A. Millichap—the practice of listing properties with a recognized industry leader. He spoke with The National Herald about the mid- and long-term prospects of the real estate market on a local, regional, or national level and how one can best evaluate an investment. Marcus says, “It is no surprise to see experts such as George Marcus, who is one of the most trusted players in the industry, speak on how the market has evolved. The fundamentals of the national market have held steady, with a few exceptions,”

The primary ingredients of successful investments are job growth and constraints to supply. Many growing metropolitan areas have these ingredients, but you would have to do product type and region to make the optimum determination of where it would be best to invest.”

The tremendous achievement in real estate notwithstanding, Marcus has also accomplished a prior deal in another area, and his passion for education is evident by his good works in that realm.

“My interest in higher education is evident by his good works in that realm. “My interest in higher education is evident by his good works in that realm,” he told TNH. “My interest in higher education is evident by his good works in that realm.” When you are taking hard sciences (i.e., physics) your political position material. John Catsimatidis: Greek America's Quintessential Self-Made Billionaire

By Constantinos E. Scaros

the most famous self-made billionaires in America – if not in the entire world – is Donald Trump, whose celebrity status, already having enjoyed an international global reach, was eclipsed quite crudely by the sole fact that he ran for mayoral office in New York City in 2013, but also by the presidency of the United States – which he officially underwent on January 20.

President Trump has often explained that he neither Fred, nor he himself entered the business world with a $1 million loan like many election opponents, Hillary Clinton, and so on. But all sides can agree on this: while Donald Trump has a clear passion for politics, evidenced not only by his run for Mayor of New York City in 2013, but also by the launching of his Sunday morning talk radio show, Cats Roundtable. After his mayoral bid – his first run for public office – fell short of gaining the GOP nomination, it didn't take Catsimatidis to observe matters differently: “I think Trump can do it if he plays it right,” he told TNH. “I think he can do it.”

Speaking at the time to Trump's strength of character, Catsimatidis said that “I think you are better off making changes. To that end, he likened Trump's decisionmaking instincts to his former interviews, whom he deemed “smart.” Even more specifically, Catsimatidis met with the mayor of his native birthplace, Nisyros, to discuss particular concerns on that island.

“In my heart I always root for Greece,” he told TNH.

Beyond his penchant for business, Catsimatidis has a clear passion for politics, evidenced in terms of name-recognition and respectability into a presidential campaign that gained traction from the start, defying tremendous odds all the way to the White House, where he didn’t start from nothing at all. The National Herald, By Constantinos E. Scaros

The first wave of Greek immigration to the United States, the Greek-American community continues to grow and flourish in a multitude of ways, its presence increasingly felt in so many sectors of private and public life, including professional sports. Unlike the rest of the sports-watching world, the United States is less consumed by international competition as it is by four major exclusively U.S.-based major sports which, in order of popularity, are football, basketball, and ice hockey. Their respective professional leagues are the National Football League (NFL), Major League Baseball (MLB), the National Basketball Association (NBA), and the National Hockey League (NHL). Four of our 50 wealthiest Greeks in America biographies are featured in this edition own a team in at least one of these four sports. In alphabetical order, they are Peter Angelos, Tom Gores, Ted Leonsis, and Alex Spanos.

TOM GORES – DETROIT PISTONS

The Detroit Pistons, originally founded in 1941, joined the NBA in 1948, and had an amazing start. After the Bird-Magic Johnson era of the 1980s, Johnson’s Lakers. But in the 1988-89 season, they finally dethroned both the Celtics and the Lakers in four straight games in the finals, the Pistons continued their winning ways until the 2009-10 season.

TED LEONIS – WASHINGTON WIZARDS, WASHINGTON CAPITALS

Leonsis owns a number of sports teams in the Washington, DC area, including the NBA’s Washington Wizards and the NHL’s Washington Capitals. The Wizards were born in 1961 as the Chicago Packers before moving to Baltimore to the Landover, MD, a DC suburb, and later the Washington Bullets, a name they kept until 1997.

In 1995, the Bullets moved to Landover, MD, a DC suburb, and became the Capital Bullets, and a year later the Washington Bullets, a name they kept until 1997. But in the 1988-89 season, they finally dethroned both the Celtics and the Lakers in four straight games in the finals, the Pistons continued their winning ways until the 2009-10 season.

Peter Angelos, Tom Gores, Ted Leonsis, and Alex Spanos. One of the original teams in the American League (AL), which along with the National League (NL), comprises the major leagues), the Baltimore Orioles have had a long and storied presence increasingly felt in so many sectors of private and public life, history, appearing in the World Series (baseball’s championship) seven times, winning three of them. But they haven’t won the Series since 1983 and had an exclusively U.S.-based major sports league for postseason play from 1998 until 2012. Angelos, who bought the team in 2003, brought them back to playoff contention in 2012, and they have made the playoffs two of the past three seasons.

The orchestra is not just a taste of the postseason last year, 2017’s club offers another chance to bring home a championship, Powerhouse slugger Chris Davis said, “That’s the attitude and mentality of everybody in the clubhouse. We aren’t out there to just kind of slide in there at the last minute. Obviously, if we have to play to win the division, and we expect to be in the postseason every year. That’s just kind of the way we look at things, that’s where the bar is now.”

Angelos has been lauded for being prudently patient.

Michael Jordan, widely regarded as the greatest basketball player of all-time and arguably the most popular athlete of all-time, was born in Brooklyn, New York. Jordan played two seasons of college basketball before turning professional. He quickly became one of the most popular athletes in the world, earning the nickname “Air Jordan.”

His scoring prowess and competitive spirit made him a beloved figure in the NBA, and his impact on the game of basketball cannot be overstated. Jordan retired from basketball in 1999, but his legacy lived on. In 2001, Michael Jordan purchased a majority stake in the Charlotte Bobcats, a professional basketball team in the NBA. This acquisition marked the beginning of Jordan’s ownership journey in sports.

After selling a portion of his ownership stake in the Charlotte Bobcats, Jordan decided to purchase the Washington Wizards, an NBA team based in Washington, D.C. In 2010, he purchased the Wizards outright, becoming the team’s sole owner. Under Jordan’s leadership, the Wizards have made significant improvements on the court, on the business side, and in the community. Jordan’s focus on player development and community outreach has been a cornerstone of his ownership tenure.

The Wizards have experienced a resurgence in recent years, making the playoffs in multiple seasons and becoming one of the most exciting and competitive teams in the NBA. Jordan’s dedication to the team and the community has earned him a place in the hearts of Wizards fans and basketball fans alike.

In 2013, Jordan purchased the Charlotte Hornets, another NBA team. Jordan’s ownership of both the Wizards and the Hornets has given him a unique perspective on the league, and he has been an active member of the NBA community, serving on various committees and working to promote the growth of the sport.

Jordan’s success in the business world has been just as impressive as his success on the court. He is a successful entrepreneur, and his companies have contributed to the growth of the NBA and the growth of the sport at large.

Jordan’s impact on the world of sports and business is truly remarkable, and his influence is likely to be felt for generations to come. Whether on the court or in the business world, Michael Jordan is a true icon of his time.
Capitals much longer. Though the team has never won a Stanley Cup (the NHL championship) in its entire history, they have made the playoffs in eight of the last nine seasons.

ALEX SPANOS – LOS ANGELES CHARGERS

The Chargers were born in Los Angeles in 1960, as part of the American Football League (AFL). The following season, they moved a bit south, to San Diego. The Chargers were incorporated into the NFL in 1970 when the two leagues merged, and remained in San Diego until the end of this past season. Now, for the 2017 season, owner Alex Spanos has moved them back to their roots – to Los Angeles. Their only championship season was in 1963, when they trounced the New England Patriots 51-10 to win the AFL title. Spanos bought the team in 1984 and ten years later, they were in the Super Bowl (though they lost, to the San Francisco 49ers). After more success and then a string of disappointing seasons, the Chargers enjoyed a good playoff run again until the last few seasons, when they have fallen on hard times again, following the decline and subsequent release of superstar running back LaDainian Tomlinson in 2010. Returning to the city in which they were born for 2017, Spanos’ Chargers look to regain their winning ways, and perhaps win their first Super Bowl. Although now 93 and in failing health, Spanos’ commitment to philanthropy is carried on by his family. A man with a kind heart, Spanos in 1985 fired two men – the first time he did such a thing in 10 years, and felt horrible about it. “I gave them each a year to find another job,” he told the Los Angeles Times. He was very generous in the city of San Diego, and there is every reason to believe that his family, through their foundation, will continue their generosity in Los Angeles.

1. JIM DAVIS

$5.2 BILLION (Fortune) CHAIR - NEW BALANCE

James S. "Jim" Davis, the Chairman of New Balance (NB), tops our list again this year. Davis, 74, the Brookline, MA-born son of Greek immigrants bought the retail sports footwear company in 1972 and took the company to new heights through the development of the New Balance 574 running shoe. The company has since grown, now featuring clothing and equipment for Lahore and soccer.

Davis' wife, Anne, serves as NB's Vice Chairman, having joined the company in 1977.

Davis is also a co-founder of the National Athletic Footwear Council. He serves on the Executive Committee of the Rubber and Plastic Industry Sector Advisory Committee which is among the country’s top 10 entities.

By the early 1990s, Cumberland Farms began to consolidate its operations, purchasing a one-cow dairy farm in Cumberland, RI for $84. The company was founded in 1999, debuted in 2001, and in 2013, averaged almost $3.4 billion in annual revenue.

Catsimatidis is chairman and CEO of the Red Apple Group, which is among the country’s top 10 entities.

The company has made a major company acquisition and management. Besides being actively involved in New Balance, he also served the industry in a whole.

U.S. and around the world. The Foundation, staunchly anti-communist as it was, contributed to the Cold War by supporting the National Endowment for Democracy during that period as well as later, according to Reubin Askew Jr., who served as governor of Florida from 1979 to 1987 under Gov. Reubin Askew Snr.

Reubin Bookman moves to New York in 1965. He becomes chairman of the board of the Miami Herald, and under his tenure as publisher, the paper has been noted for its investigative reporting.

Bookman has a long and distinguished career in journalism, serving as an editor at the Miami Herald and as a reporter for the New York Times and the Wall Street Journal.

Bookman is a member of the Board of the Florida Bar Foundation and has been active in many community organizations, including the Boys and Girls Clubs of America and the United Way.

Bookman is married to the former Mary Lou Bookman, who is also a journalist and author. They have three children: Andrew, who is a lawyer; Michael, who is a venture capitalist; and Susan, who is a photographer.
Ted J. Leonsis, 60, has been the driving force behind the arena’s capital projects and sports world and he’s not planning on slowing down anytime soon. He is the founder, chairman, CEO and majority owner of Monumental Sports and Entertainment, which owns and operates the Washington Capitals (National Hockey League), Washington Wizards (National Basketball League), Washington Mystics (Women’s National Basketball League) and Verizon Center in downtown Washington. He also owns the Maryland Black Bears, a minor league hockey team that operates Bert J. Rankings Capital (the Washington Capitals’ training facility and front office headquarters) and the George Mason University Patriot Center.

Ted started his career off by creating marketing companies. He built AOL into the first billion-dollar Internet company and the world’s biggest media company, helping to increase its membership from fewer than 400,000 to more than 4 million customers. He then retired from AOL in 2006 and currently serves as vice chairman.

The grandson of Greek immigrants, Leonsis was born to a family of modest means in Brooklyn, and spent his early years there.
